

The True Story —OF— Woodrow Wilson

CHAPTER XII.
How Woodrow Wilson nearly embraced the National Progressive Ticket in 1912.

Woodrow Wilson forewent long before he entered politics as a candidate for governor of New Jersey that the democratic party of the nation needed new leadership. His letters to friends indicate that he looked forward to the campaign of 1912 as the occasion for a rebirth of the democratic party. Prior to 1910, when he became governor of New Jersey, suggestions that Mr. Wilson himself might prove the new leader did not appear to him as a possibility of fulfillment. He had no party following. He had made speeches from time to time, it is true, on public questions and had spoken from one end of the country to the other before civic bodies and educational institutions but not until the democratic leaders in New Jersey sought him for the gubernatorial nomination did he begin to think that perhaps at last the road to the presidency had been opened.

As with prophetic instinct, Woodrow Wilson wrote a friend in the spring of 1912: "Roosevelt and Taft were busily engaged in splitting the republican party wide open —so that we may get in."

Mr. Wilson was then governor of New Jersey. He entered the democratic primaries in various states and found himself successful in some but not in others.

GUARD AGAINST PEST INVASION

Agricultural Dept. Regulations Protect Against Insect Pests.

"Protection of Wisconsin against newly introduced pests and diseases is one of the most important and beneficial activities of the Wisconsin department of agriculture," says a statement issued by John D. Jones, Jr., commissioner of agriculture. "In this country there are half a dozen insect pests and plant diseases of major importance which have not reached Wisconsin. Most of them have been introduced into other states directly from Europe and Asia, and active wars against them are being carried on in the localities in which they have become established. Wisconsin's only means of protection consists of quarantines against the materials which might carry these injurious enemies of agriculture, and second, of supporting the federal government in attempts to limit the spread and reduce the damage caused by them.

Alfalfa Weevil
"One of the most serious is the alfalfa weevil, brought to Utah about 15 years ago in packing material and gradually distributed throughout that state and parts of several adjoining states since its introduction. Wisconsin maintains a quarantine against alfalfa hay to prevent the introduction of this insect, and has taken up with the federal government the idea of the desirability of a national quarantine on this subject. So far the weevil has never been discovered in any Mississippi valley state and every year which it can be kept out of this part of the country is worth millions to the alfalfa growers.

"The European corn borer, originally introduced into Massachusetts and various points in New York and Canada, has now spread west until its present area takes in every county surrounding Lake Erie in the states of Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York and in the Canadian province of Ontario. In Canada it has spread throughout almost the entire growing district of the latter province. The damage in Massachusetts is terrible and in Canada is serious, but in the northern and western areas the borer has only one generation per year and is not so greatly feared as it is along the Atlantic coast.

Watch Nursery Stock
"Around Philadelphia, over a wide area of New Jersey and Pennsylvania occurs the Japanese beetle, which was introduced in 1910 and has been spreading at the rate of from 10 to 20 miles per year ever since. As it attacks many field and garden crops, flowers and shrubs, fruit, shade and timber trees, there is always danger of its being introduced into new localities on nursery stock and other plants. As this pest is a white grub in the larval stage, and a leaf-feeding beetle as an adult, it has double the usual powers of injury and its multiplication is so rapid that it is considered one of the worst insects which has ever been discovered in the country.

"Insects pests which it is hoped can be kept outside the state are the potato wart, discovered a few years ago in Pennsylvania, and the chestnut blight, which will find practically no chestnuts to work on when it arrives here. An insect which we may expect in the near future, however, is the Mexican bean beetle, a leafy beetle which attacks garden beans and soy beans and is more injurious to them than any bean pest we have in the state. In the Rocky Mountains, where it is a native, it does little damage, but when it is introduced into Alabama it has spread at the rate of from 100 to 200 miles per year and now covers large areas in the southern states and extends as far north as southern New York.

Graduating Pests
"A well known pest against which state and federal quarantines have so far been successful is the apple moth, attacking the New England forest. New York is now spending about half a million per year in attempting to establish a barrier about 25 miles in width along the eastern border of the state. If New York is successful in this attempt and quarantines and other restrictive measures are successful in preventing it from jumping the barrier, it may be kept out of Wisconsin for years.

"Keeping out insect troubles which the farmers of Wisconsin have never seen is work of a less spectacular nature than eradicating pests and diseases that they have arrived," states Mr. Jones. "It nevertheless is one of the most important problems of the state department of agriculture and its final value is beyond calculation. Often there are many difficulties to be encountered and sometimes quarantines interfere to some extent with commercial practices, but the small expense of administration of regulations of this type is one of the most important and practical investments the state can make."

HAYES WILL SPEAK HERE ON SATURDAY

Tuberculosis is the most serious disease which badger poultry raisers have to fight.

While it is found in all parts of the state, according to J. B. Hayes, poultry specialist of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, who will speak at the meeting of the Rock County Poultry association meeting here March 15, tuberculosis among poultry is not as widespread in many other states.

Tuberculosis is generally easy to detect, says Hayes, "although birds under a year old, while they may have it, do not show any signs. Loss of weight and extreme wasting away of flesh on the breast and lameness are almost certain symptoms. The liver and spleen are usually spotted and there may be nodules on the intestines. Spots on the liver do not always mean tuberculosis if the bird is fat. The digestive tract is almost always affected, but lung cases are very rare.

It is comparatively easy to get rid of poultry tuberculosis," states Hayes. "Clean up the place and keep the chickens off for a few months until the germs have been killed. The dirt floor of the chicken house should be dug up and replaced with clean sand and plenty of air-stacked lime should be scattered around. Housing and care will control the disease.

"Dispose of the old birds. If all the fowls on the farm are disposed of and no more brought in for four or five months all danger should be passed. Buy healthy chicks and raise them on fresh ground. By the time the chicks are grown the old house will be safe for them."

Don't Envy Me

Youth and beauty are at your command

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I made myself a face cream. For 25 years as a stage star I have played a beauty's part. I have kept that beauty. At a grandmothers age I retain my youthful bloom.

I owe this to four great beauty helps, perfected by French experts. The foam, I believe, the greatest beauty helps in existence. They have brought to many of my friends just what they brought to me. I am convinced that millions can obtain like benefits from them. So I am now placing these supreme helps at every woman's call.

White Youth Clay

One is my White Youth Clay. Not like the crude and muddy clays so many still employ. This is a super-clay, white, refined and dainty—perfected by 25 years of scientific study. Its results will amaze and delight you.

Youth Clay purges the skin of all that clogs or ruins it. It revives the skin—makes it clear and rosy. It firms the skin, combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores. It multiplies one's beauty. And my greatest complexion shows how it keeps one's youth.

Many women seem to drop ten years with one application of White Youth Clay. The cost is 50c and $1.

WILL DEVELOP BIG PARK THIS YEAR

City to Get Early Start on Roadway—$5,000 Available for Improvements.

Assurance that Jansville will do something toward utilizing the vast undeveloped tract of Riverside park this year is given in preliminary plans being made by City Manager Henry Traxler, who is convinced that the park cannot be left unattended any longer. The council has foreseen the necessity of developing the great 123-acre tract by appropriating $5,000 in the 1925 budget for the construction of a paved roadway and making other improvements.

While the city engineering department is still employed incessantly in preparing plans for the highway, the city is planning to get an early start on this year's plans for the Riverside park roadway have not been lost sight of and will be prepared just as soon as the paving rush has subsided. It is hoped to start construction of the entrance within the next two months.

Careful Planning Necessary

Mr. Traxler is expected to be called upon as one of several to speak on the Riverside project in an open forum discussion at the Twilight club supper Tuesday night, following the address of John Stone, chairman. The city manager is inclined to the belief that the advice of landscape architects and experienced park men be secured before any extensive development is undertaken. However, he realizes that the city unduly can carry out the preliminary work of building the roadway, cutting out the underbrush, removing stumps and trimming off dead branches.

Will Welcome Suggestions

"But we should not go into the project on a large scale without advice from experts," Mr. Traxler declared Tuesday. "The city could throw away a lot of money by not following out a definite and well-organized plan." The manager said he would welcome the suggestions which may be offered by various citizens at the Twilight club session. He is anxious to conform to their suggestions and desires, he declared.

Mr. Traxler has already interviewed several park planning experts in regard to Riverside but has made no definite plans yet, nor has he engaged any one of them to give advice.

Discussed by Council

The improvement of Riverside park was the subject of informal discussion at the council meeting Monday night when President J. K. Gray suggested that a day be set aside for the three business men's luncheon clubs and other organizations to gather at the park and to discuss the improvement of the park. The council agreed that the city should not attempt to put on a show in the big dance hall at the park.

City Manager Traxler and Councilman George A. Jacobs said they favored such a plan. Riverside park as part of the city's proper police supervision could be obtained, but City Attorney Roger G. Cunningham reported it advisable to also consider intervening property, including the Meis estate. He said efforts are now being made along this line.

At the Theatres

THE APOLLOS

A picture brimful of smiles and tears, "The Big Brother" is quite the most appealing movie seen in local theatres in many weeks. While lovable Tom Moore is the star, the picture is given staunch support by Mickey Bennett, who as a star of the first water has been seen in many a picture. He is literally walks away with the picture. The film, which really is a picture, for the Big Brother movement sponsored by the late Theodore Roosevelt, is a human story. It is the story of a boy who is named Jim. Jim is the big brother of Mickey Murray, done by this new child star. He has promised Mickey's dying brother that he will "fetch up the kid decent," the fulfillment of the promise is the main theme of the picture. The idea of a man is Jim, whom he thinks runs the town. The separation of the child from his big brother is one of the most touching scenes in the picture.

Mickey Bennett is superb in the court room scene, where he lauds the accomplishments of Jim, the "ten minutes' picture" to the story. Jim's protestations, Mickey paints his hero as the toughest guy on the east side, and the picture is a masterpiece of the kind—the child who will have to go to the orphanage. SHOALS PLANT TO FORD BY VOTE OF HOUSE, 228 TO 142

(Continued from page 1.) Five Weald, farmer-laborer of Minnesota, to reduce from eight percent to five percent the profit which Ford could make on the fertilizer he manufactures at Muskegon Shoa. A vote of 197 to 176, the house knocked out of the bill a clause giving the government authority to take back the property if Ford failed to manufacture fertilizer for two years. This emergency clause was written into the bill on Saturday by a vote of 123 to 46.

Final Attack Fails

The house defeated an effort by Representative Morin, republican of Pennsylvania, to send the bill back to the military affairs committee. Morin's plan was an eleven-hour attempt to keep under the control of the federal power commission after he started operating Muskegon Shoa. Representative Graham, republican of Illinois, then offered an amendment appropriating $100,000 to "build a fine radio station for Mr. Ford." This was ruled out on a point of order.

$8,200 PAID ON CAFETERIA COST

Balance of $3,900 Remains—Teachers' Salary Question Discussed.

Payment of most of the bills for the cafeteria equipment in the new high school was authorized by the board of education at its monthly meeting at the high school Monday night, following the report of the equipment committee by Commissioner Mrs. A. W. Holmes.

The bills of the Albert Pick company for glassware, china and silverware, amounting to $1,125.25, and that of McVear and Palmer company of this city for $550.25 for the connection of the various devices to plumbing fixtures were paid in full. Eighty percent of the bill of the A. L. Keifer company for $3,332.55, amounting to $6,706.32, was ordered paid. That amount pays for all furniture and most of the kitchen equipment, including the range, bread slicer and steam table.

It is estimated that about $50 more will be needed to complete the plumbing connections, bringing the total plumbing bill up to about $400, about $100 less than was anticipated. The bill for the dishwashing machine, for $450, was not paid. The committee was authorized to pay one-third of the price of the ice box and cooling machine after installation is completed. The total cost of that item is $1,772.

Planned With Cafeteria.

The commissioners made an inspection of the cafeteria following their meeting, and were well pleased with the entire equipment. Everything in the kitchen, with the exception of the refrigerator and cooling machine, which have not yet been connected, but will be within the next few days. A demonstration of the operation of the various devices was given.

Another step toward final adoption of the salary schedule for teachers was taken, but it was decided that the amounts as specified on the schedule drawn up last year should not be completely adhered to this year. The present policy of the board is to make gradual increases, until the new plan is in effect.

Salary Schedule Discussed.

The schedule was drawn up by the teachers' union, working with the president of the board, last year, and provides a minimum salary of $1,000 for a normal graduate with no experience, and a maximum salary of $1,500 for a teacher with a master's degree, with 11 years of experience. A $50 advance for each year's service in the Jansville schools is offered, in most cases, and a $25 bonus is offered after attending summer school. The increase for the first and second year's experience here, except in a few cases, amounts to $100, thereafter it is $50 per year until 11 years are spent here, when an increase of $25 dollars is offered until the maximum salary for that class is reached. However, teachers may increase their salaries by attending summer school sessions, or by taking special work. The superintendent, F. O. Holt, reported that the system to date had worked satisfactorily, and was being lied to be an advantage both to the board, in calculating their expenses in advance, and to teachers. The superintendent was authorized to send out copies of the schedule to all teachers this week.

Architects Are Paid.

The final bill of the architects of the high school, Van Iyan and De Geleke, except for the plans for the gymnasium bleachers, amounting to $500, was ordered paid, on motion of Commissioner Francis Grant. Their complete bill amounted to about $1,400. Money in the treasury was reported at $167,692.41.

Following the report of the playgrounds committee, headed by Mrs. Holmes, and the reading of extracts from a valuable 23-page report prepared by V. E. Klotz, director, the board extended a vote of appreciation to the work of the committee. The detailed report of the year's work made by the latter will enable a new director to carry on the work with the same success as it has been carried on in the past, it was said by board members.

A vote of appreciation was also given the Washington-Grant Parent-Teachers' association for their work during the year. A committee in the play given Friday night, from which most of the money for the purchase of a piano was realized.

Two high school bands, the senior and girls' organizations, will be sent to the state band tournament at Lake Geneva this year as a result of the vote of the board to pay the entry fee of $24. The fee includes the payment for concert music to be sent. The value of band work was discussed and the expressions of members were that it was one of the most valuable courses offered, and that in many cases been the means of not only keeping students grades up, but that in some cases it has actually held children from leaving who would otherwise have dropped out.

Through a request from the secretary, the local board voted to become a member of the state association of school boards, and will send a delegate to the meeting at Jan. Claire this spring. The cost of fee was $10, and includes the privilege of informational service.

Enrollment Decreases

For the first time in two years the report of the attendance department showed a decrease instead of an increase. On Feb. 1, the enrollment of the schools was 4,585, and on March 1, 4,578, a decrease of seven students.

Something of the new methods of education as explained at the national convention of superintendents late last month was given in the report of the superintendent. He talked especially on the changes in the curriculum and the scientific tests by which the actual amount of knowledge of students could be learned. He also spoke of the technical manner in which experiments had been conducted for the development of children traits or characteristics of children, and the results obtained.

The Filipino Hope Chest.

President Coolidge's stable paper on the independence of the Philippines was not the most serious blow to the hopes of the junta which has been backing the move for independence, but quite another happening within the past few weeks, provided the hurt. Four years ago the Filipino legislature appropriated a sum amounting to half a million dollars annually for the Independence Mission. With this large amount available for lobbying here and for work at home, the Filipino mission has been able to hold to its ranks a number of the natives who otherwise were opposed to independent action. It has also enabled the mission to publish a paper of no mean size and get-up, in America, maintain a large and active lobby at Washington and thus procure interest of some congressmen in their demands. It has made Filipinos, otherwise less denunciatory, most demanding and arrogant in their attitude and able to seek and find a hearing in many quarters which otherwise would have probably been closed. They evidently convinced our own congressman, Henry Allen Cooper, and he introduced an independence bill in the house.

But the goose that laid the golden egg and enabled the lobby to be maintained at Washington was killed by Auditor Wright, at Manila. He is the watchdog of the treasury and questioned the legality of the fund from several angles. He wanted the persons to whom funds were paid, to make an accounting much as we require from our candidates here under the corrupt practices acts. But the Filipino supreme court refused to take jurisdiction. Manuel Quezon, head of the mission in Manila, was informed that the vouchers for any expenses hereafter would not be paid though there would be funds for the Texas mission party now in Washington to get back home. This has been disturbing to the United States senate and now Sen. Ladd desires an investigation. One of the chief grievances named is cutting off this junketing, publicity and lobbying fund. What use is there to lobby if one has to pay his own expenses? The interest of congress and congressmen is greater when there is a nice, well dressed lobby, capable of extending social courtesies and paying for taxicabs and all that, than when the lobby is on its uppers and eating off arm chairs.

"We demand to know," says your palmed and care worn congressman, "by what right the half million is cut off?"

Mr. Roxas, of course, can go to our Congressman Cooper and get sureness of sorrow by permitting himself to listen to the bill Mr. Cooper has introduced for Filipino independence. It might assure the worried Roxas that when that is done he can raise a million or twice that to play with and not make account to a bunch of ignorant native taxpayers.

We have waited in vain for the hats of favorite daughters to join these of favorite sons in the presidential ring.

The Buzzards of the Senate.

The late Bill Nye, humorist, said that it was always safer to call a man a liar over the telephone and that was one reason why he was in favor of a phone in every home. We have three United States senators who have the Nye idea worked out thoroughly and daily put it in practice. Neither of them has ever fathered any constructive legislation or has made a name for himself in the arena of statesmanship. They come under the general term of blatherkite which term is not libelous. They could not and would not dare call a man a crook to his face and they would not dare present to any court of justice the statements and conclusions they make on the floor of the senate from shreds of gossip, innuendo and conjecture with which they have filled the congressional record. These three men are from the south. Heflin is of Alabama. He achieved the front page many years ago by thrashing a negro on a street car in Washington, and has always been in more or less trouble. Heflin has had a fight or so with men in his own party like Carter Glass, senator from Virginia, who is so far above Heflin in ability as not to be mentioned in the same breath. Harrison, of Mississippi, is perfect in invective and denunciation and that only. He is a political spokesman of his party, much like a plug-baited ballplayer, standing in front of the front sidewalk and calling the crowd with loud voice and making monkey faces to keep the children in good humor. Then there is Caraway, with the same pungent odor of the seed that his name recalls. He is of the same pattern of his two companion pieces, more serious and more dull witted. These are the men whose attacks are reprinted and given out as gospel. They all are off the same cloth and have the same mind. Mention "negro" to them and they see red. They are at their best when defending the well known myth of southern civility.

All over their native heath fly great flocks of buzzards, red of eye, snuffling to heaven, high and wide-soaring, perfect on wing, but the closer one gets to them the more offensive they become. The buzzard, with his flight seems to typify these three southern senators as nothing else can do.

This is the trio which for weeks now has been endeavoring to besmear the president of the United States. Their failure has made them more bold in speech and more loose in their denunciation. They will still fail. The repugnance of the public for them and their attitude is the

Children Start Savings Accounts

By FREDERIC J. HANKIN.

Washington.—Los Angeles is teaching its school children to save money in such an effective way that other cities are quickly adopting it. In nine months $400,000 has been deposited in Los Angeles banks by pupils under 11 years of age, most of whom never had bank accounts before.

It has been achieved through the increasingly popular practice of treating children with the same respect as adults. The youngsters are encouraged to open accounts with the banks—not of the penny-by-penny variety, but really good business accounts like those of grown-up folk, with the same kind of a passbook, presented at the same window that receives adult patronage.

Furthermore, they are persuaded to do their own depositing, not leaving the matter to parents, as was formerly the case. Through this constant personal contact with the banks, they become more interested in saving and acquire a practical knowledge of banking forms at a time when they are most susceptible to new impressions. It is also of value in promoting thrift as habits acquired at an early age are apt to cling.

This conviction has led the school authorities of Los Angeles to cooperate with the bankers in establishing the new school savings plan. United in the movement are 25 parent banks and 120 branch banks, every member of the school board, the superintendent of schools and staff, 146 principals and vice-principals and 5,500 earnest and enthusiastic teachers. Leading this group is a supervisor of school savings who is highly skilled in employing these forces to the best possible advantage.

Heretofore, most school savings plans have met with little success, largely, it is thought, because they use the penny as a standard of saving and because the banking is handled entirely by schools, thus providing a great deal of extra work for teachers. The Los Angeles plan avoids these difficulties by pursuing the standard of saving in dollars and by establishing a direct connection between the pupil and the banks.

At the opening of the campaign of the Bankers' School Savings association, every school child under the age of 11 was presented with a small, circular metal bank. Coins were to be saved in this receptacle until it contained a dollar, with which the owner became eligible to open a savings account in one of a large number of banks.

Accordingly, one day 5,000 children opened savings accounts in various banks by depositing their individual dollars and receiving small but impressive pass books in exchange. At the end of the first school year, 40,000 accounts had been established with an average balance of $10 each.

Through thrift talks and personal interviews between teachers and pupils and parents, new accounts are being opened at the rate of 250 a day, and some schools now report that every one of their pupils owns an account. In stimulating the children's ambition to save, care is taken to avoid any indications of covetousness of money and pupils of well-to-do circumstances. The highest praise is given not to the largest savings account but to the pupil who earns the largest amount. He may earn it by performing small tasks and errands for his parents or by selling his services to outsiders or by getting high marks in his studies. It does not matter how he earns it, if it is the reward of honest effort.

In fact, so much significance is attached to earning power that some of the schools are riding the boys and girls to obtain light employment that will not interfere with their studies. A list of opportunities, such as newspaper-selling, errand running, berry picking, light gardening, cleaning, is now posted in the corridors of some of the schools. This list is a result of a wide canvass of such opportunities by the savings association, which is of the opinion that boys and girls who earn their savings accounts are apt to cherish them more seriously than those who depend upon the generosity of their parents.

One of the benefits of the plan, already noted, is the better physical and mental condition of the pupils. Every penny, nickel and dime saved means a reduced consumption of cheap candy and soft drinks, which results—the school authorities say—in healthier bodies and clearer minds, as the children's evening savings accounts make better progress in their studies. They also are apt to develop greater will-power. The child who can train himself to forego a chocolate soda or a trip to the movies in order to keep up the percentage on his savings is developing good material to withstand the crises of life, the teachers aver.

Incidentally, a savings account is especially valuable as a practical means of teaching arithmetic. Abstract problems in interest and compound interest have no terrors for the eleven-year-old after he has drawn a 3 or 4 cent out on his own account. Moreover, the possession of capital, even in a meager degree, tends to increase his regard for its power and use. Some of the teachers report a new curiosity concerning business conditions and investments since the children have been going to the banks.

One boy recently sought the advice of his savings bank in the investment of $100, laboriously saved dollar by dollar.

"I want to go into business," he explained earnestly, "and make my money earn profit."

The man who listened to this youthful ambition did not smile. The boy was advised to invest his money in a small fruit stand, which is now earning the desired returns.

With their children setting them such an estimable example in thrift, Los Angeles parents likewise are exhibiting more enthusiasm for saving.

"Imagine the effect of the thrift literature constantly distributed in the schools," said one of the bankers interested in the plan, "every piece addressed to parents is calling upon them to set a good example in saving. Naturally, this reflected in an increasing number of adult depositors."

The cost to the banks of Los Angeles of operating the school savings plan last year was $400,000, or about $1 for each $10 account. This included the provision of the small metal banks as well as the expense of administration. The bankers feel that the investment has been distinctly worth while. Not only have the children's accounts proved immediately profitable, but they have brought with them many intangible benefits. "In years to come," says the bankers, "the influence of school savings is certain to carry on beyond school days. Thrifty school children today are growing up to become thrifty American citizens of tomorrow."

Interviews with some of our oldest people disclose the salient fact that when they have heretofore lived through March they have existed through the whole year. That's cheering.

We might get some other utensil for congress to play with since the Tenpot is pretty well worn out. The oratorical garbage can is also overcrowded.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE MOTHER OF THE NEIGHBORHOOD

I remember. I remember in those days of old. We never called a doctor in when baby had a cold.

We called a neighbor woman in, a kind old lady who

Removed her bonnet and her shawl and told us what to do.

The gentle mother of the street—we loved her as our own—

She'd comfort her children through the croup, and brought them through alone;

For she had read a doctor's book which stood upon the shelf,

And there was scarce a mortal ill she hadn't cured herself.

She'd tell us what to do for rash and what to do for chills,

She'd cure more aches with housecat tea than doctors come with pills;

And if we lacked some thimble red to wrap round brother's throat,

She'd let you take the bottom hem right off her petticoat.

What intricate and marvelous cures this good old lady worked,

Within those kindly eyes of hers how much of comfort lurked!

Her very presence in the room would end our cured fright—

We knew her child had had "it" once, and he had lived all right.

With goose grease she would rub our chests. Un-counted are the kisses

Who went the way of sudden death to furnish her with grease.

She'd scorch our skin for fever spots and look upon our rashes green,

And then tell mother what to do for inflammation of the lungs.

But Thine has taken her away, and now the doctors call;

The mother of the neighborhood no longer cures us all.

And Dr. Johnson smiles at me and doubts me when I tell

That once a woman lived next door who knew the way to cure.

HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12, 1921.

Astrologers read this as rather an unfavorable day, for Mercury dominates in malefic aspect.

Neptune, also, is adverse.

There should be special caution exercised in signing papers of all sorts. Contracts and leases should be made in haste until better planetary conditions prevail.

Bad news for the government of the United States may be received at this time; and diplomatic problems of unusual import may be expected.

This is held to be rather an unlucky day for beginning long journeys, especially if they are to be made by water transportation.

The Moon is in Gemini ruled by Mercury and the lungs may be easily affected owing to this influence. It is believed that the lungs may be an unusual nervous tension perceptible while this rule of the stars continues.

Signs held inimical to peace of mind and business success have strong influence today and for this reason, hasty decisions or important initiative should be avoided.

The seers counsel conservative action in all affairs whether business or personal, for there may be a strong temptation to act with reckless impulsiveness.

There is supposed to be unusual danger of accident and automobilists should be especially careful.

The opposition of the familiarities to Neptune, which is retrograde, is held responsible for much misunderstanding of malicious conditions in the amusement and the business world.

Motion pictures will again be the subject of much discussion and production methods will be much improved.

Neptune is in aspect supposed to have a strong influence in oil speculation and again astrologers give warning of threats and scandals connected with the oil industry.

Persons whose birthdate it is may be troubled by letters or legal papers in the coming days, which will bring them many temptations to spend money lavishly on non-essentials.

Children born on this day may be inclined to enjoy themselves at the sacrifice of their best interests. Of this may be declared.

Children born on this day may be inclined to train as they are likely to acquire fixed habits easily. They should be individual in character and very intelligent.

NASAL OPERATIONS IN ANTHIA

A few years ago it was the fashion to ascribe the true spasmodic asthma to reflex irritation and a good many sufferers were subjected to various operations for the liberation or removal of the suppurative sources of irritation from the nasal cavities. Do not, I pray you, scoffers, confuse this with the modern fashion of attributing everything to focal infection and operating to remove the focus. This modern fashion we are still wearing and when we get ready to lay it aside and don a new one, I'll submit to the event in hitting the target. Under the quaint old fashion which prevailed away back in 1900-1910, when an asthmatic sufferer labored up with a focal infection, the tonsil or turbinate was as good as doomed if the doctor had any aspirations toward being a nose and throat specialist. On good effect of the absolute fashion was the removal of a lot of nasal polyps which would otherwise have been neglected until they really did work some harm to the patient. I remember one doctor pointed it out the first few new cases of nasal polyp I had, that the patients would not acknowledge even a touch of asthma, so I could cure the asthma by removing the polyp. Doctors found away were reporting miraculous cures of asthma from just snicking out a bit of polyp and I was eager to add another case to the record.

Nose and throat specialist, I have reported some 25 cases, from a series of 24 cases of asthma, in which some kind of nasal operation had been done. Polyp, hypertrophic tonsil, adenoid, enlarged turbinate, deviated septum, spurs, deviations of the septum and hypertrophic or infected tonsils were the conditions operated on. In 15 cases the patients believed relief from the usual attacks of asthma. In two of these, atrophic rhinitis developed some time after the nasal operations. In the other cases the operation gave no benefit. One patient, who had nasal polyps removed, now attributes his asthma to the operation. In no case was the asthma influenced by the operation on the nose. As Dr. Kahn concludes, the removal of the polyp is not a surgical condition in itself demands surgical relief without reference to the asthma.

Throat operations for spasmodic or bronchial asthma therefore belong to the category with "re-

Please tell me whether alum mixed with water and added into the scalp for excessive oiliness is injurious to the hair. (S. C. E.)

Answer—I do not know, but I should think not. Sulphur in one form or another seems to be the most effective application for excessive oiliness of the scalp. (S. C. E.)

Answer—I think it is. The regular use of a saline laxative may be advisable temporarily in the treatment of certain conditions, but that is a question for the physician to consider individually.

Cheap Politics in Senate Fails to Smear Coolidge; the Finish of Ed. McLean

Washington, D. C.—The senate explosion and the resulting explosion of the oil scandal, a central figure in the oil probe, was a political and a financial, and rather cheap politics at that, as the reaction to the episode was felt here today.

If the two messages from the president had had anything whatever to do with the oil scandal, it should have been made public, just as everything else that might throw any light on that disgraceful matter. But they were not even mentioned in the oil probe, and simply were lumped into the record so that demagogues, realizing the hysteria that is prevalent at more or less of the oil scandal, might raise the issue.

But they have been "leaked" in the mess. Mr. Coolidge is not in the oil scandal. The committee has not found directly or indirectly anything that links him with it. They have been "leaking" for two weeks through the interesting as well as ridiculous McLean telegrams, hoping to find something to smear him with oil.

That has largely been the purpose of the examination of the dozens of private messages sent to and from the millionaire Washington publisher. Mr. McLean is a man who has descended from a place of a power in the nation's capital to such a discredited position that politicians who used to be his intimates, and accept freely his hospitality, now run at mention of any possible connection with "McLean."

But the next question is, "What has happened to Coolidge?" He is dragged into the oil scandal by his own remissions. Should he not use the utmost power of the presidency to push to the limit the prosecution of the oil cases, and should he not disclaim from public service those discredited by the oil probe, then the charge might fairly be against him that the inherited antipathy of the Harding regime had prevented a vigorous dealing with the oil matter. As far as the oil scandal is concerned, there are, in the opinion of the only way President Coolidge can come into the scandal.

It may have been poor judgment for the White House to exhibit such continued confidence in McLean as the telegram revealed, placing upon the construction that they were other than mere perfunctory exchanges such as occur many times daily with many people. But that is about the worst criticism that could have been made of the incident, fairly and putting it in its worst light.

Sought for Weeks to Link Name. The oil committee has "sifted" for weeks to link Coolidge with the mess through two avenues—one McLean's intimacy with the administration as revealed by the score of telegrams, and through the trip of Basil Stemp, the presidential secretary to St. Paul, where he met both McLean and Fall. That McLean occupied a place of a power in the nation's capital to such a discredited position that politicians who used to be his intimates, and accept freely his hospitality, now run at mention of any possible connection with "McLean."

Here may be summed up just what has been brought out that amounts to anything regarding the White House relationship to the oil scandal.

First—Stemp's connection with it. He went to Florida, on his own testimony, for his health. He had no other previous reason. At Palm Beach he met both Secretary Fall and McLean, the publisher. He had several meetings with the two, but, according to his own story, discussed the oil matter only in a casual way, advising them to tell the whole truth of the situation. The innuendo, of course, is that he went there to enlighten the matter and, as it were, to tell the whole truth of the situation. The innuendo, of course, is that he went there to enlighten the matter and, as it were, to tell the whole truth of the situation.

Washington knew of intimacy. The McLean relationship with the administration, or more accurately with such of the administration as was left by Mr. Harding, presents one of the most amazing "insides" of Washington. This intimacy of the publisher with the administration was not unknown to Washington. But folks here have read with all the avidity of a good murder trial testimony, the bringing of details to light, the kind of the White House telegraph service should become operator on the McLean private wire would seem important, except for the fact that he had taken great employment of this kind before. That White House attaches should be asked to do this or that for McLean was not of a personal nature, nor was it of a confidential nature, nor was it of a confidential nature.

The McLean "bug." Why McLean, a millionaire publisher, should want to be an operative for the department of justice, wear a badge and possess its code book—a dollar-a-year detective—has given Washington much to gossip and smile over. But it is even whispered, although not proved, that the publisher also had a police badge. This may not be correct. That McLean should use a department of justice code given him by one, in his personal matters, and that his secretary should go to the government bureau of investigation to get private messages from McLean decoded, reveals an amazing intimacy between a private citizen and a government bureau that needs more explanation than has been given yet, and it hardly offers fertile ground for innuendo.

Lied to Help Oil Fall. Now for the amazing and ridiculous telegrams—the "Apple, peach, pear, duck, champion, code" messages. Here is about the "sub" of that episode: McLean, for some reason, lied to the committee to help out his friend Fall, saying he lost the ex-secretary $100,000, which Fall couldn't explain. Why McLean thus injected himself into the oil scandal has been explained by the fact that he was a friend of Fall's and that he was a friend of Fall's and that he was a friend of Fall's.

The silly codes and mysterious messages would do credit to a detective comedy sketch in a vaudeville house. They are important largely only as they show what pressure
